

CANNN at the National Table

Northwest Territories | Nunavut

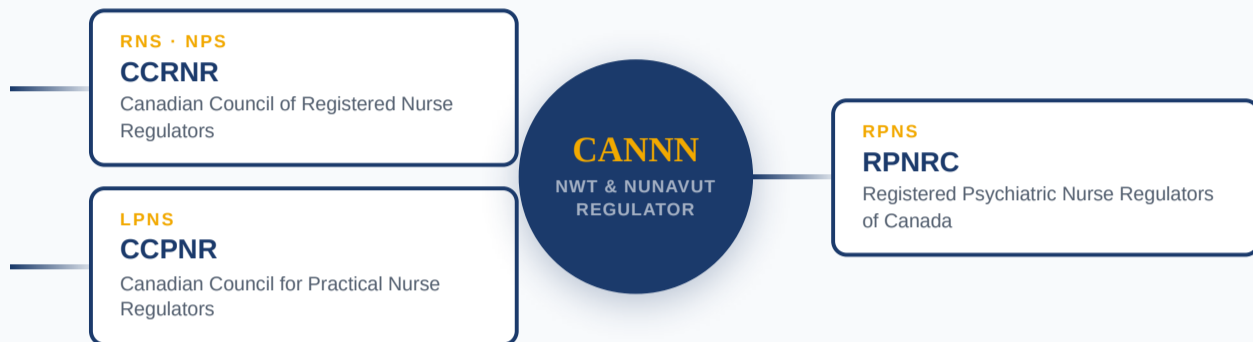

Regulatory body for RNs · NPs · LPNs · RPNs

How your regulator connects the Northwest Territories and Nunavut to national nursing standards

CANNN doesn't just regulate nursing in the NWT and Nunavut — we bring the north to the national table. As your regulator, we hold seats on the national bodies that set standards, shape policy, and advance nursing regulation across Canada. That means what happens nationally is connected to how you practise here.

NATIONAL BODIES CANNN PARTICIPATES IN

FOR RNS · NPS

CCNR

Canadian Council of Registered Nurse Regulators

The national body for registered nurse regulators. CANNN's membership connects NWT and Nunavut RNs and NPs to national conversations about registration standards, entry-to-practice, and regulatory best practices.

ALSO AT THE TABLE — BROADER REGULATORY PARTICIPATION

CNRC

Canadian Nurse Regulators Collaborative

The umbrella body connecting CCRNR, CCPNR, and RPNRC. CANNN's membership in all three feeds into this national collaborative advancing regulatory excellence across Canada.

NCSBN

National Council of State Boards of Nursing

An international body through which nursing regulatory authorities counsel together on public health, safety, and licensing standards — including the NCLEX examinations used across North America.

Why this matters for nurses and employers in the NWT and Nunavut

When CANNN sits at these tables, northern voices shape national standards — not the other way around. Registration requirements, standards of practice, and regulatory best practices are developed collaboratively across jurisdictions. CANNN's participation means the realities of nursing in the north are part of that conversation. Questions about how national standards affect your registration or practice? We're here.
